"ND 2995 3923. Broch." (1)

"A small artificial knoll - the remains of a Pictish dwelling." (2)

"The remains of a broch, now visible as a low, turf-covered sub-circular mound with a slightly concave centre, 1.0m high and some 20.0m in diam., situated on near-level ground on the NE bank of a burn. Soil erosion has revealed a heavy stone content, but no definite traces of wall faces can be seen, save possibly on the NW side, where a single course of stones protrudes through through the turf, forming a horseshoe shape, 2.0m across, indicating a mural cell."
